

TRADER'S AXIOM

Losses are Pain.
Realized losses are realized pain.
Realized Pain, man seeks to avoid, at all cost.
The Cost is high for pain avoidance.
Therefore, the loss is avoided, thus unrealized.

The market's design and function is to produce unrealized losses,
it's a zero sum game.
Unrealized losses produce Pain.
Therefore, the Market is Pain.

Pain is against Man's Nature.
This Pain signals an invading, adversarial force at work against man's natural condition.
Therefore, the Market is against Man.

But, what if Man must live with the Market?
He must, therefore, control the Pain, which is against his Nature that the Market produces through its designed role to produce losses,
it's a zero sum game.

Controlling Pain is achieved by taking losses that the market produces.
The losses taken should be done so before the Pain becomes overwhelming and lethal.

So...control Pain by willingly taking losses that are now small.

Profits are Gain.
Gain is the absence of Pain.
The absence of Pain is aligned with Man's nature and should be embraced and held.

Embraced and Held profits, overtime can expand.
Expanded Profits are Big Profits.

Big Profits can never be achieved by taking small profits.

THEREFORE, CUT THE PAIN AND HOLD THE GAIN.

DARRELL WAYNE LOVELL
MAY 28, 2004